The Wesleyan University Department of Economics invites applications for a tenure-track position to begin July 1, 2012 from scholars with primary research interests in economic development. Preference will be given to candidates whose research and teaching interests involve development issues in Africa or southern Asia, financial issues relating to economic development, and/or the use of experimental methods in studying these issues. Candidates should be prepared to teach upper-level electives in development and at least one other field, and to contribute to the Department's introductory and core programs. The teaching load is four courses per year. Wesleyan has a strong and diverse undergraduate student body and offers a generous sabbatical program as well as competitive salaries and benefits. To apply, visit <https://careers.wesleyan.edu/applicants/Central?quickFind=51475>. Applicants should submit a curriculum vitae, three letters of recommendation, and a sample of scholarly writing via the online application process. Complete application files must be received by November 28, 2011 to be assured of full consideration. Contact Gilbert Skillman, Department Chair, with questions at econsearch@wesleyan.edu. Wesleyan University is an equal opportunity employer that welcomes applications from women and historically underrepresented minority groups.
